This beautiful Hudson River town has been a vigorous manufacturing centre for cigars for about fifteen years. a little less than a decade ago that the first big cigar establishment was opened in the town. To-day there are fourteen large manufacturing concerns there, three of the largest being the American Cigar Company, Henry J. Hoffman and George Van Siyke & Horton. At the plant of the American Cigar Company the average weekly roll of employes is about 1,200. Experts on figures, particularly census figures, say the present population of Kingston is about 30,000. Therefore there is employed in that one factory one out of every twenty-five residents of the city. The Van Slyke & Horton plant has now 430 employes; it often has many more, and consequently about one out of every sixty-nine residents of the place
